

Right on your local Lehigh County ballot, the two ends of the experience spectrum are represented in the State Senate races: Nick Miller, one of the youngest state lawmakers in modern Pennsylvania history, and Lisa Boscola, who has served over three decades in the state legislature.

The Newest on the Scene: Nick Miller (PA Senate District 14)

- Where He Came From: Miller is a fifth-generation Allentown native. He graduated from Allentown Central Catholic High School, earned a finance degree from Penn State, and completed master's degrees in Public Administration and Law from the University of Pennsylvania. Before entering full-time politics, he worked as a project management consultant for IBM and as an Allentown realtor.
- What He's Doing: Miller entered elective office in 2019 when he was elected to the Allentown School Board at age 24. In 2022, at age 27, he ran for Pennsylvania State Senate District 14. Upon winning, he became the youngest person elected to the PA State Senate in 135 years. He is running for his first re-election term.
- Why He's Running: His platform stems directly from his school board tenure, where he focused on public school underfunding and property tax burdens. His main priorities include state education funding reform, urban economic development in Allentown, housing affordability, and infrastructure modernization.

The Multi-Decade Veteran: Lisa Boscola (PA Senate District 18)

- Where She Came From: Born and raised in Bethlehem, Boscola graduated from Freedom High School and earned both her bachelor's and master's degrees in political science from Villanova University. She began her public career working as a Deputy Court Administrator for Northampton County.
- What She's Doing: Boscola was first elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in 1994 (taking office in January 1995). After two terms in the House, she was elected to the State Senate in 1998 and has held her seat continuously since January 1999. She has spent over 31 consecutive years in the state legislature and is running for her 8th term in the Senate.
- Why She's Running: Boscola is known as a moderate Democrat who frequently crosses party lines. Her core focus throughout her career has been eliminating school property taxes, pushing for government reform (such as independent redistricting and open primary voting for non-affiliated voters), and securing state development grants for the Lehigh Valley.
